

The Green Bay go to guy for growing a business

Door Landscape is among 200 businesses Chuck worked with closely last year.

“Chuck Brys at the SBDC is one of my most trusted advisors,” says Cliff Orsted, owner of Door Landscape [1], Egg Harbor. He’s talking about one of the business counselors in the Wisconsin Small Business Development Center [2] managed by the University of Wisconsin-Extension.

Cliff’s landscaping business has more than quadrupled in size since the SBDC began working with him four years ago.

“The SBDC has played a big part in our growth and success,” he says.

Door Landscape is among 200 businesses Chuck worked with closely last year, assisting in the creation of business plans, raising start-up funds, developing business concepts and managing marketing strategies. An SBDC counselor for five years, he also is a certified public accountant experienced in leading and growing manufacturing businesses.

The UW-Green Bay SBDC helps entrepreneurs start and grow businesses through educational services. Working with hundreds of entrepreneurs every year, the SBDC helps improve business performance and turn ideas into viable business concepts. The center serves clients in Brown, Calumet, Door, Florence, Forest, Kewaunee, Manitowoc, Marinette, Menominee, Oconto and Shawano counties.
